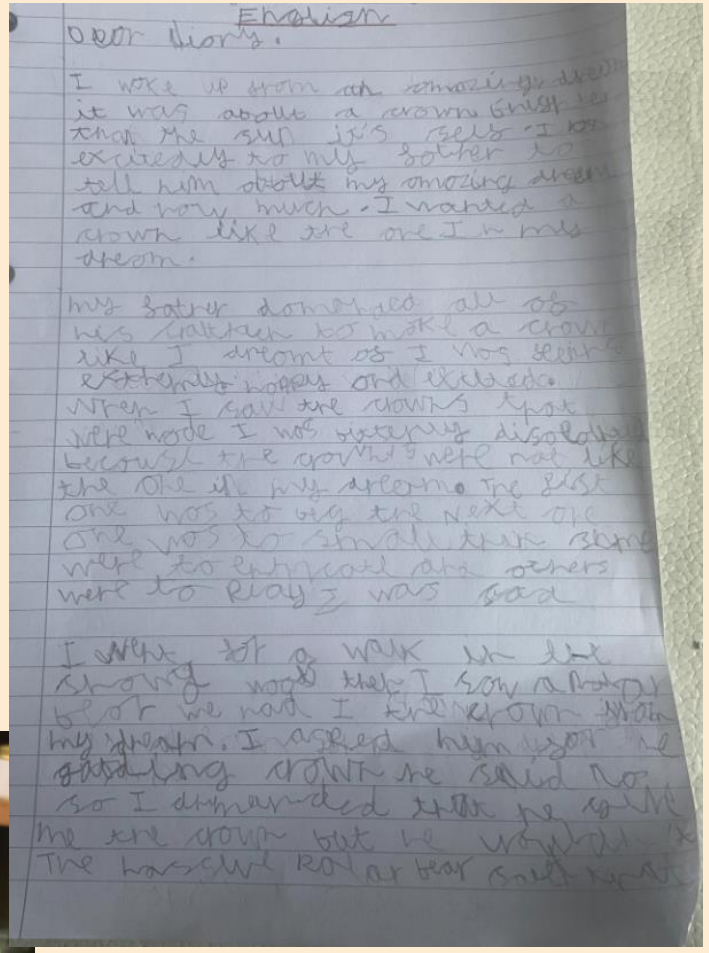
I ran to him and begged him for the crown but he would give it to me instead he said the only way he will give it to me is if I went with him He said he wouldent come for me in a few days So I guilty ran home to tell my father.

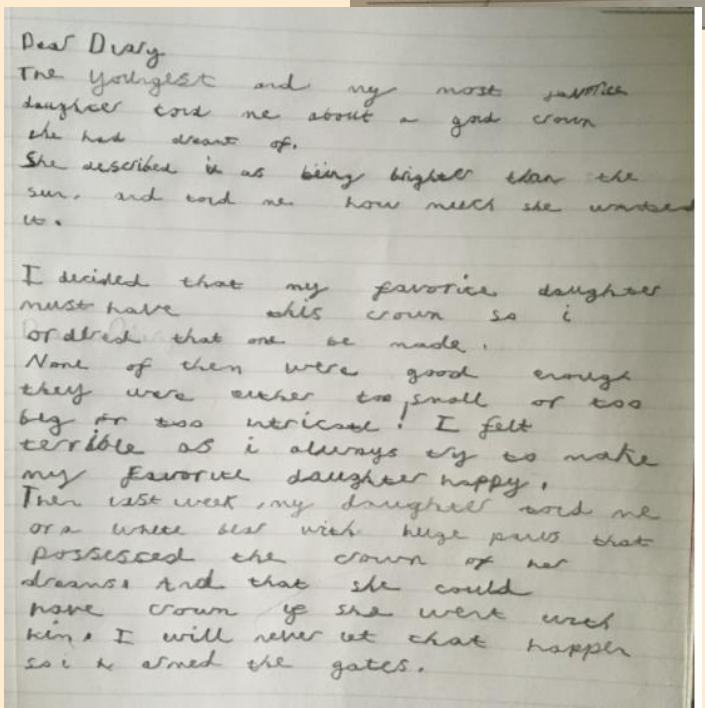


Dear Diary,

I woke up from an amazing dream it was about a crown. Guilty I realised that the sun it's rays. I ran excitedly to my father to tell him about my amazing dream and how much I wanted a crown like the one I in my dream.

My father dismissed all of his attempts to make a crown like I dreamt of. I was extremely happy and excited. When I saw the crowns I just were made I was starting dissolved because the crowns were not like the one in my dreams. The first one was too big the next one was too small. I tried and tried with my friends and others went to play. I was sad.

I went for a walk in the forest thinking about the crown I saw a bear. I ran to him I saw a flash of gold and I knew it was the crown from my dreams. I asked him if he would give me the crown but he said no. So I demanded that he give me the crown but he would not. The massive bear ran



Dear Diary,

The youngest and my most favorite daughter told me about a gold crown she had dreamt of.

She described it as being higher than the sun, and told me how much she wanted it.

I decided that my favorite daughter must have this crown so I ordered that one be made.

None of them were good enough they were either too small or too big or too intricate. I felt terrible as I always try to make my favorite daughter happy.

Then last week, my daughter told me of a white bear with huge paws that possessed the crown of her dreams. And that she could have crown if she went with him. I will never let that happen so I turned the gates.

Dear diary

I was sleeping peacefully when I had a dream about a crown that was so gold, it was brighter than the sun itself. When I woke up, I told my father about it and how much I wanted it. He tried all over the kingdom to find someone to make me one but none of them were as good as the one from my dream.

Then, last week I was walking in the forest when I suddenly saw this huge white bear. He had a shaggy pelt and these huge paws, as big as paddles. And in the air he was tossing up a crown of gold. But not just any crown, the one from my dreams!

I ran to him and begged him for it but he would not sell it to me. He said the only way I could have it is if I went with him. I wanted this crown so badly that I immediately said yes. He told me that he would come for me in one week so I hurried home to tell my father.

He did not seem happy with my news and locked me away in the castle. He said that I am not allowed to go. When the bear came for me, he broke into the castle and my father sent him away with my eldest sister. But the bear was too clever, he figured out it was not me.

Next, my father sent my other sister. She looked very scared when she went with the bear but didn't say anything. Soon though, the bear was back demanding me. My father had no choice but to let me go. He looked worried but I was not scared.

I climbed up on the bear and off we went. We rode for what felt like forever but I was never afraid. He asked me once if I was and when I told him no, he purred with happiness. I don't know what is going to happen next but I feel happy...

2. What's a word that could describe how George's father is feeling?
3. Why are George and his father excited about the enormous animals?

A Crane for Grandma

Grandma, from high up on the rooftop, could see everything that was going on, and she didn't like what she saw. She wanted to be the center of attention, and nobody was taking the slightest notice of her. George and Mr. Kranky were running around and getting excited about the enormous animals. Mrs. Kranky was washing up in the kitchen, and Grandma was all alone on the rooftop.

"Hey you!" she yelled. "George! Get me a cup of tea this minute, you idle little beast!"

"Don't listen to the old goat," Mr. Kranky said. "She's stuck where she is, and a good thing, too."

"But we can't leave her up there, Dad," George said. "What if it rains?"

"George!" Grandma yelled. "Oh, you horrible little boy! You disgusting little worm! Fetch me a cup of tea at once and a slice of currant cake!"

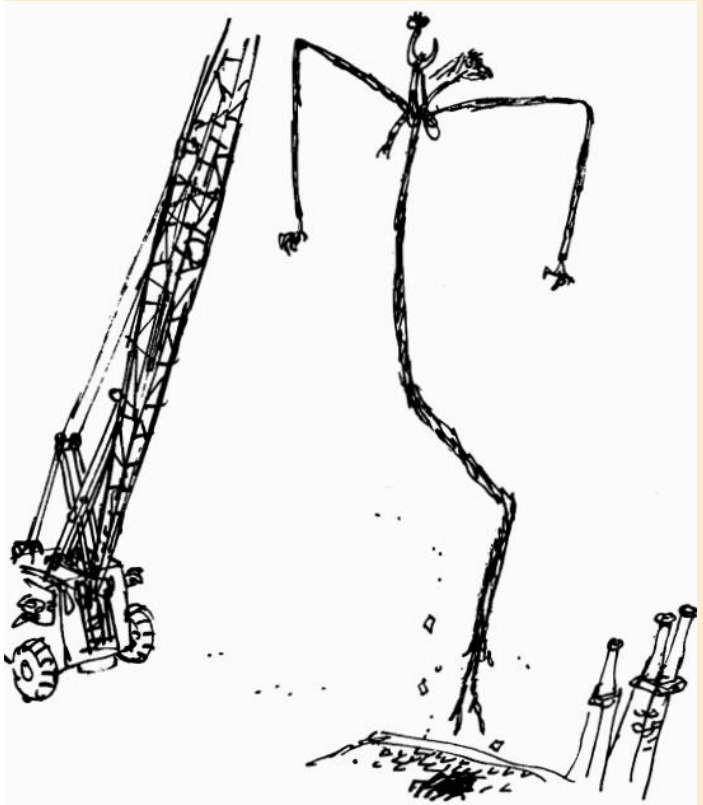
"We'll have to get her out, Dad," George said. "She won't give us any peace if we don't."

Mrs. Kranky came outside, and she agreed with George. "She's my own mother," she said.

"She's a pain in the neck," Mr. Kranky said.

"I don't care," Mrs. Kranky said. "I'm not leaving my own mother sticking up through the roof for the rest of her life."

So in the end, Mr. Kranky telephoned the Crane Company and asked them to send their biggest crane out to the house at once.



The crane arrived one hour later. It was on wheels, and there were two men inside it. The crane men climbed up onto the roof and put ropes under Grandma's arms. Then she was lifted right up through the roof. . . .

In a way, the medicine had done Grandma good. It had not made her any less grumpy or bad-tempered,
